The Tufts boys' programme consists of 12 numbers. Nobody knows how long their repertoire is, since their "pile" has never been exhausted, even by the many encores they regularly receive. They believe in having a good supply of catching hits to meet the demands which their splendid principal numbers are sure to cause. There are "trick plays" by the Tufts glee club as well as by the Tufts football team. You can see this organization on Friday night, February 8.

The month of January continues to strive to break the cold weather record. Those who figured on a late Sunday morning breakfast to permit the weather to moderate a trifle were disappointed because the thermometer registering 26 below at sunrise obstinately refused to rise when the people wanted to. The weather was not much warmer in the middle of the day. Nor had the temperature gone very high this morning, the reports setting the figures at about twelve below zero.

A farewell assemblage in honor of the Rev. and Mrs. S. T. Achenbach will be held in the church vestry tomorrow (Tuesday) evening at eight o'clock. All are cordially invited to attend.

LONG FIGHT ENDED.

Carpenters and Woodworkers Agree to Amalgamate.

Among the important decisions rendered at the A. F. of L. convention was the one which requires the carpenters and woodworkers to get together in one organization. Those who have watched closely the trend of affairs in that particular industry for the past few years know that an amalgamation was inevitable. The carpenters, with a powerful organization of 170,000 members, gradually were absorbing the woodworkers, with a membership of less than 15,000. There are some who believe it was a question of might making right, but after the bitter feeling which has been engendered dies out it will probably be found that the amalgamation is best for the interests of all concerned.

When the woodworkers' organization was formed in 1895 the carpenters were willing to draw lines of demarcation at the factory door, allowing the woodworkers jurisdiction over the men in the factories. As the organization of both grew it was found difficult to observe those lines. In some cities the carpenters took over the men in the mills, while in other cities the woodworkers had control. There was a continual turmoil. In one city the carpenters would grant a charter to a local of woodworkers; in another city the woodworkers would charter a local of carpenters. In every convention of the American Federation of Labor the dispute would be thrashed out. On two or three occasions the woodworkers were given decisions over the carpenters, but the latter kept on regardless of decisions.

Chicago was always the stronghold of the woodworkers. Two months ago, when the carpenters broke into this stronghold and chartered two unions of woodworkers, it became apparent that the end was near. The woodworkers made a fight, but developments proved that the membership was not united on the subject, and many of the members favored joining the carpenters. Realizing that further efforts to keep their organization intact would be futile, the representatives of the woodworkers in the convention succumbed to the inevitable and agreed to the terms. An amalgamation must be consummated within two years or earlier if it can be brought about. The most important part of the decision is that all hostilities between the two unions must cease, and the executive council of the American Federation of Labor is under instructions of the convention at once to revoke the charter of either union which violates this agreement—Luke Grant in Chicago Record-Herald.

WARRING UNIONS AGREE.

New York Plasterers Settle a Long Standing Dispute.

The officials of the old and new unions of plasterers, which have been engaged in a warfare for more than a year in New York city, have come to an agreement, and the fight, which resulted in many building strikes, is ended. The old union is local No. 25 of the Journeymen Plasterers' International union and was locked out by the Building Trades Employers' association for refusal to abide by the conditions of the arbitration agreement. The new union, the Journeymen Plasterers' society, was then formed under the arbitration agreement.

The terms of settlement provide that the new union is to form two locals with charters from the International union. There will thus be three locals of the one International union in New York city which will recognize one another's cards.

Jewelry Workers' Strike.

The strike of jewelry workers for an eight hour day has been declared off, says Luke Grant in Chicago Record-Herald. So far as outward appearances go it was a failure for the workers, for they returned to their posts without having gained any concessions. They, however, refuse to regard the strike as a failure. They assert that it was the means of bringing the unorganized men into the union and that the organization is in a stronger position today than ever before. All the men who desired their former places were reinstated, as the employers secured practically no nonunion men during the strike. It was the jewelry workers' first experiment in the way of a strike, so that if they have gained nothing else they have no doubt learned a lesson by experience that will prove valuable to them in the future. The employers have also learned a little, so that the next time the workers make a request for a reduction in hours it will probably receive more attention than it did last time.

Majority Rule.

At Omaha, Neb., the Central Labor union and other associations have worked for some time to get a direct vote of the people on the question of adopting the initiative and referendum for municipal affairs. A state law enacted in 1897 authorizes each city in the state to establish majority rule in local affairs. The city council submitted the question at the November election, and the system was adopted, the vote being five to one.

Cheyenne.

Cheyenne is a word of doubtful origin. Some say that it is from the Indian cheyenne, meaning stranger; others that it is French, from chien-dog—and that the town in Wyoming of that name was called so from the prairie dog villages common on the plains.
